

Staying Safe from Impersonation Attempts

At Gordon Food Service, we are committed to protecting our customers, employees, and partners from fraud and scams. Criminals may attempt to impersonate Gordon Food Service or other trusted organizations to gain access to your sensitive information or financial resources. This page provides information to help you identify and report suspicious communications.

Understanding the Risks

Scammers use a variety of tactics to trick individuals into providing personal information, making payments, or granting access to their systems. These attempts can take many forms, but they often share a common goal: to deceive you into taking an action that benefits the scammer.

Impersonators may try to create a sense of urgency or fear, pressuring you to act quickly without thinking. They may also try to build trust by pretending to be a legitimate representative of Gordon Food Service or another organization you recognize. They can seem trustworthy, professional, and legitimate.

Identifying Suspicious Communications

Not all communications appearing to come from Gordon Food Service, even if they have our logo or phone number on them, are legitimate. Here's what to look out for:

- Unexpected Requests: Be wary of unsolicited communications asking for personal information (like passwords, bank details, social security numbers), financial transactions, or access to your computer/systems. Legitimate organizations, including Gordon Food Service, will never request sensitive information through email or unsolicited phone calls.
- Sense of Urgency: Scammers often try to pressure you into acting immediately, claiming an urgent problem or a limited-time offer. Take your time and don't be rushed into making a decision.
- Unusual/Unexpected Communication Methods: Be cautious if you receive a request through an unusual or unexpected channel. For example, if you normally communicate with Gordon Food Service through a specific portal or email address, be suspicious of a request coming from a different source.
- Poor Grammar and Spelling: While not always a definitive sign, many scam communications contain noticeable errors in grammar and spelling. It is worth noting that as AI technologies advance, poor grammar and spelling will be less of a "tell-tale" sign, but can still be something to keep an eye on.
- Inconsistencies: Look for inconsistencies in the communication. Does the email address or phone number match official Gordon Food Service contact information? Is the tone or style of the communication different from what you expect?

- Requests for Payment: Look for requests for payment in unusual forms, for example, a gift card or bitcoin.
- Too Good to be True: If an offer appears too good to be true, it is probably a scam.

What to do if You Suspect a Scam

- Don't Respond: Do not reply to the suspicious communication or click on any links. Avoid providing any information, especially personal or financial information.
- Don't Engage: Do not engage with the requestor. If you get a request that seems suspicious, contact the person or company through confirmed communication methods, such as a number on the official website.
- Verify the Communication: If you are unsure whether a communication is legitimate, contact Gordon Food Service directly through a known, trusted channel. Do not use the contact information provided in the potentially suspicious communication. If you would like to verify if a communication you received is legitimate, fill out the form below
- Report Suspicious Activity: Please report any suspected impersonation attempts to Gordon Food Service by filling out the form below. Provide a copy of the email, as well as additional relevant details, including the date, time, method of communication (if not email), and any specific context from the communication. You might also consider contacting your local law enforcement, as well as the Federal Trade Commission.

If you Believe You've Been Scammed

If you believe you have provided information to a scammer or have been a victim of a scam, take the following steps:

- Contact Your Company's Security Team: Immediately contact your company's security team so they can investigate the incident and take further action if necessary.
- Contact Your Financial Institution: If you provided financial information, immediately contact your bank or credit card company to report the incident and take steps to protect your accounts.
- Change Your Passwords: If you provided passwords or other login credentials, change them immediately for all affected accounts. If you use the same, or a similar, password for any other unrelated accounts, change them as well. Use a password manager along with strong, unique passwords for each account. Ensure multi-factor authentication is turned on for all sensitive accounts.
- Monitor Your Accounts: Regularly monitor your bank accounts, credit card statements, and other accounts for any unauthorized activity.
- Consider a Credit Freeze: You may want to consider placing a credit freeze on your credit report to prevent scammers from opening new accounts in your name. You can contact the three major credit bureaus (Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion) to request a freeze.

- File a Report with the Authorities: Report the incident to the appropriate authorities, such as the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) in the United States (reportfraud.ftc.gov) or your local law enforcement agency.
